The principal donors of food, was well as the objet suppliers of transport for its distribution and other assistance, have been the United States and the countries of Western Europe, acting both through the De-velopment Fund of the Euand bilaterally.

In these predominantly Moslem countries, the comparative absence of interest of the Arab_countries in helping the victims of the drought is felt with embarrassment, pain and bitterness. The head of Chad's drought-relief program, Public Works Minister Ab-doulays Djonoums, said in an

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11 (AP).
—Secretary of State Henry Kissinger will visit China Nov. 25-29, the State Department announced today.

The long-anticipated trip, designed to maintain warming relations with Peking, will follow a Nov. 23-24 meeting in Vladivos tok, in the Soviet Union, between President Ford and Soviet party leader Leonid Brezhnev, Mr. Kis-

The visit to China will facilitate an immediate report to Chinese officials on the results of the Ford-Brezhnev meeting. In his last visit to China, a year ago, Mr. Kissinger tried to reassure the Chinese that the policy of détente with Moscow would not be at Peking's expense. At that time, the United States joined China in a declaration opposing "efforts by any other country or group of countries" to establish domination in any area of the

Mr. Ford also said Mr. Kissinger brought back "encouraging news" from the Middle East and from the Indian subcontinent, where he helped reduce policy differences with Indian Prime Minister Indira Gandhi.

hera has set off angry opposition trom many South Koreans who feel that his trip amounts to approval by the United States of President Chung Hee Park's tough one-man rule. And in a country that has been ardently pro-American, and very dependent on the United States Mr. Ford's visit has aroused some of the first anti-American sentiment heard here in years.

In the last week alone, a group of 300 Korean Roman Catholic priests, about half the nation's total, called for Mr. Ford to "reconsider" his trip. In addition, 21 Protestant clergymen, including nine U.S. missionaries, demanded in a statement that Mr. Ford cancel the stop here "because it shows support for the Park regime, which does not have the trust of the Korean people." A Presbyterian minister, the Rev. Ho Byung Sup. was arrested by the Korean Central Intelligence Agency for trying to mimeograph the statement. There have been other damands: That Mr. Ford meet with opposition leaders and that he convey American concern to Mr. Park over the Korean President's increasingly repressive actions.

EEC's Summit Plans Hit a Snag

By David Haworth

BRUSSELS, Nov. 11 (IRT) .-Foreign ministers of the European Economic Community ran into difficulties here today as they tried to work out an agenda for next month's planned EEC summit conference in Paris.

"The ministers are working on the assumption that the talks will be held Dec. 9-10, but the Italian and Irish delegates said that they do not want a con-ference at all unless it will clear the way for establishing the longdelayed EEC regional development fimd.

In Paris, Foreign Minister Jean Sauvagnargues warned to-night that failure to agree on holding a summit conference would cause major problems, Reuters reported.

(In a French television interview, Mr. Sauvagnargues said, "If it is not held, the economic and psychological consequences will be enormous. The truth is that things (in Europe) are going badly, very bedly." [He said that this meeting was necessary to give Europe new momentum toward unity and to broach grave economic problems in common, including inflation and balance of payments difficulties. Dutch minister Max van der Stoel also questioned the value of holding a summit conference -on the grounds that, so far, such an event seems unlikely to yield concrete results.

Garret Fitzgerald, Ireland's representative, insisted that the proposed summit would be the third at which a regional aid fund had been promised. It is vital for public opinion that on this occasion the fund become a reality,

Africans here fear that this might be the start of serious fighting between various elements of the guerrilla movements in

Feelings have been running high during recent weeks with the arrival here of delegations of tha three guerrilla movements. After fighting in the country-

The police and Portuguese Army officials would not say last night just who was doing the shooting or how it started. Several large fires were reported in the area. Radio stations played taped appeals from the leaders of the three guerrilla movements and from the Portuguese military gov-

Cuba's Backers Short 2 Votes At OAS; U.S. Plans to Abstain

QUITO, Ecuador, Nov. 11 (Reuters).—A vote to end Cuha'a will not vote against the move isolation from the Organization to end sanctions indicates a modof American States appeared eration of the hard-line antidoomed to failure tonight when the United States joined Haiti and Guatemala in deciding to abstain.

Pro-Cuba countries at the OAS conference here needed 14 votes to achieve the necessary twothirds majority to end diplomatic and economic sanctions in force against Cuba since 1964.

Conference sources said the announcement of the U.S. abstention was made at a private meeting of delegates by Deputy Secretary of State Robert Ingersol.

The campaign to admit Cuba was led by Colombis, Costa Rica and Venezuela, but they were able to muster only 12 votes. They also failed to win sufficient support for a compromise motion which would leave each country free to make its own decision on a resumption of relations with Havana.

[Brazil suggested today that the conference be recessed for three months, the Associated Press reported. The situation is not mature enough to adopt this kind of a decision," agency quoted Brazilian Foreign Minister Antonio Francisco Azevedo de Silveira as telling the

The U.S. decision to abstain did not surprise informed conference observers, who have believed all alone that Washington would be prepared to go with a majority decision but would avoid having to cast a decisive vota.

Cuba policy followed by the Ni:on administration, observers sald.

The United States was criticized behind the scenes today by delegates who felt that it should hava played a more positive role. Besides Cuba, the OAS has 23 members, but only 21 bave tha right to vote on the sanctions, because two joined after the sanctions were imposed.

After Haits announced its decision earlier today, anti-sanction nations had placed their hopes on wavering Guatemala and Bolivia to push through a compromise resolution leaving each country free to resume relations

De Facto Ties

This would institutionalize de-facto situation under which several countries, notably Argentina and Peru, have already ignored OAB instructions and established diplomatic and trade

The announcement by Haitian Foreign Minister Edner Brutus that his country would abstain apparently indicated that no rich South American country had come forward with an offer of financial aid, which Haiti had made clear early in the conference was the price of its vote.

The conference, attended by all the OAS foreign ministers with the exception of Argentina's Alberto Vienes and U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, opened Friday night and is due to end

When defense attorneys tried to block a portion of Mr. Gray's testimony about his subsequent meeting with Gen. Walters, prosecutor James Neal argued that "We've got to be able to show the very words that obstructed the FBI investigation for two weeks in this case,"

Referring to the message Gen. Walters carried to Mr. Gray, Mr. Neal said, the FBI was "not about to uncover anything except a plot to bug Democratic National Committee headquarters."

Kissinger Wants Foreign Policy 'Hard-Headed and Cold-Blooded'

By Stewart Hensley

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11 (UPI).—Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, criticizing his own department, said today that the United States should forget about trying to reform the world and adopt a "hard-headed, cold-blooded" American foreign policy.

"We face the tension between the requirements of security and the imperatives of our values," Mr. Kissinger said in a security Association.

speech to the Foreign Service Association.

"The idea that we could reform all the governments of the world has been disproved" by a number of developments, "including our domestic experience."

Facing an audience that included many critics of his virtuoso style of diplomacy, Mr. Kissinger rejected any idea that be disdains the ability of Foreign Service officers. But he asserted that they have not kept up with the times. He said that "in earlier periods, when things were more settled," it might have been sufficient for Foreign Service officers to simply report what was going on abroad.

But in the present complicated international situation, he said, "it is imperative to report not only what people say, but what they mean ... and to do so on a basis of hard-headed, cold-blooded evaluation of what the situation requires." In that respect, he said, "we are not doing nearly as well as

"We cannot base foreign policy on star performers," he said, in an obvious reference to some observers' assessment of his own diplomatic style. "We cannot rely that someone will come along every few years to manipulate events."

He said that in the 10 years immediately following World War II, U.S. foreign policy was conducted in a "very imaginative and strongly creative" manner.

"We implemented internationally the concepts of the New Deal at home," he said. "We believed that international stability would almost automatically come from closing the gap between expectations and reality..."

But in the 1970s, he said the United States is obliged to pursue foreign policy in a "much more complicated" situation because of the changes in the international picture.

Moscow Chess 3-2 As Korchnoi Wins

MOSCOW, Nov. 11 (Reuters) —Soviet chess grand master Viktor Korchnol tonight raced to a 19-move victory over compatriot Anatoly Karpov to narrow Mr. Karpov's lead to 3-2 with three games remaining in their world challenger's final here.

If neither has won five times after 24 games, the leader earns the right to challenge Bohhy Pischer of the United States for the world title.

Mr. Korchnoi's win after little more than an hour of the 21st game, played in Moscow's Tchaikovsky Concert Hall, gave a new twist to the match, in which Mr. Karpov, 23. had held a 3-0 lead at 18 games and seemed almost certain of eventual victory. But last week Mr. Korchnol, 43 won the 19th game in a 79-move epic clash. The 20th game, post-poned from last Wednesday to Friday due to Mr. Karpov's IIIness, ended in a draw.

Charles de Gaulle airport. Paris'newest attraction. Enjoy it.

As of November 1st most Air France Paris flights land at Charles de Gaulle. So much the better for you. Because it'd be worth visiting even if it weren't an airport.

But its striking architecture wasn't designed for looks alone. It encompasses a great many innovations for your comfort and convenience.

Spacious boarding and arrival areas arranged like satellites around the main terminal; moving carpets to whisk you effortlessly from place to place; shorter waiting time between check-in and boarding.

Charles de Gaulle is not only close to Paris, but you arrive at the Terminal Porte Maillot near the major business and tourist areas of the right bank. And right across the street from the new Méridien, our four-star hotel with 1023 de luxe rooms.

And since it's Air France's new home base, we didn't spare any effort on our installation. Three of the seven satellites are exclusively for Air France passengers. Thus you avoid crowds and confusion. You have the most direct access through customs to taxis and buses.

Plus the fastest most convenient transit facilities. With all our personnel trained to handle any kind of travel problem, from writing a ticket to reserving a hotel room.

Air France to Charles de Gaulle airport. Don't miss it.

Mr. Scholz, who was a political refugee here and a member of the French Resistance against the Nazis, said it was "quite normal" that he should be at the Armistice Day commemoration.

"This is a homage to the victims of the first world war and, furthermore, the German Democratic Republic belongs to the community of socialist nations," he said.

In another innovation, "La Marseillaise," France's national anthem, was played in a dirge-like drumless version ordered by Mr. Giscard d'Estaing. Almost everybody on the spot, except for a few young Frenchmen, preferred the traditional martial ren-

Reward Set In Murder of Berlin Judge

Death Seen Linked to Baader-Meinhof Gang

BERLIN, Nov. 11 (UPI).-The West German government offered a 50,000-mark ($20,000) reward today for information concerning a gang of gummen who killed West Berlin's chief justice last night and threatened "assassinations" in six other cities.

West German Interior Minister Werner Maihofer, in offering the reward, described the slaying as a "cowardly murder."

An anonymous caller telephoned the West German news agency DPA and said the "Red Army Faction Successor Organization" had shot to death Chief Justice Guenter von Drenkmann and planned further "assassinations" in six West German cities.

Police said there was little doubt that Justice von Drenkmann's murder was linked to the case of Holger Meins, 33, an im-prisoned Baader-Meinhof gang suspect who died Saturday while on a hunger strike.

Murder Trial Awaited

Police arrested Mrs. Ulrike Methhof and the gang's co-leader, Andreas Baader, in 1972. They are awaiting trial for attempted murder, bombing and similar

The aim of her gang, which Mrs. Meinhol called the Red Army Faction, was to overthrow the establishment, she said.

In September, Mrs. Meinhof called on her followers in prisons to go on hunger strikes until the authorities recognized them as "political prisoners" instead of common criminals, thus enabling special treatment. A recent survey showed that up to 30 imprisoned supporters of the gang were on hunger strikes.

In the murder of Justice von Drenkmann, police said five men, one holding a bunch of red carnations, went to his home late yes-terday and told him through an intercom system that they were bringing flowers for his 64th birthday—celebrated a day earlier.

The justice opened the door and the men burst in, police said. One of the men shouted abuse and it appeared that they wanted to kidnap Justice von Drenkmann, police said. But a scuffle broke out and shots were fired. The men fled to two waiting autos.

A JUST PEACE FOR THE PALESTINIANS

AN OPEN

For the first time in decades, a just peace in the Middle East seems a possibility. In the corrent efforts to achieve a settlement of the conflict your government is playing a central role.

There is a serious danger, however, that the search for peace will fail if the rights and needs of all the peoples of the area are not fully considered. It is our conviction that there is no real contradiction between the interests of the Palestinian and the American peoples. For this reason, and because of our belief in the American people's sense of justice, their understanding of their own inferests and their ability to influence their government, we are addressing this letter to you on behalf of the Palestinian people.

AMERICAN

Who are the Palestinians and what do they want?

They are a people of over three million, for whom Palestine has been a home for centuries, proud of their deeply-rooted culture and their identity. Over 65,000 Palestinians are university graduates and they have one of the highest literacy rates in the Third World. This they have achieved despite their dispossession and dispersion, as a result of the creation of the State of Israel in 1948. Currently, half

Today, twenty-six years after their expulsion, the Palestinians are still denied the right to return to their homeland, and over a million of them inhabit refugee camps in Gaza, the West Bank, Jordan, Syria and Lebanon. Those Palestinians who have remained in Israel have seen their property expropriated and are treated as second-class citizens in their own land. It is the children of the Palestinians driven from their homes in 1947-48 and 1967 and of those who remain under Israeli occupation who are today fighting for their right to return to Palestine, a right recognized over the past twenty-five years by successive U.N. resolutions and repeatedly endorsed by

of them live in Palestine under Israeli rule and the rest in exile outside it.

Their aim is that Palestine should become a state which is neither exclusively Arab nor exclusively Jewish, in which there is no discrimination on grounds of race or religion, and which will exemplify the ideals of secular democracy for both Palestinian Arab and Israeli Jew.

pes this concern the American people? The injustice done to the Palesfinian people is at the root of the conflict in the Middle East. The responsibility of your government in this regard is threefold. The United States was the principal sponsor of the creation of Israel in 1948. It has been its unwavering champion ever since. Concurrently, its pledged word through the U.N. to do justice to the Palestinians has not been matched with deeds. Hence your moral responsibility as the source of authority of your elected government.

At stake is the very principle of self-determination on which your country's independence is historically based. For nearly two hundred years, the example of America's struggles against colonialism and slavery, and her ideals of democracy and personal freedom have inspired oppressed peoples the world over. The writings of men like Tom Paine and Thomas Jefferson, and the actions of courageous leaders like Abraham Lincoln have served as models for revolutionary leaders in Africa. Asia and Latin America. And as recently as World War II, the United States was a leader in the fight against fascism and in defense of the freedom of the world's peoples.

However, the fulfillment of the ideals for which America stands is not all that is at issue. Your

It is not in your interest to alienate millions of Arabs, Muslims and Afro-Asians over the question

It is not in your interest to continue to expend billions of dollars in perpetuation of Zionist dreams of empire.

th is not in your interest to re-activate the energy crisis.

It is not in your interest to be dragged into direct military involvement in the Middle East which carries the constant risk of direct confrontation with the U.S.S.R.

Those who claim that the United States must support Israel unconditionally are in fact preventing a just settlement in the Middle East. Such a settlement can only come about with the realization that the confinued banishment of the Palestinian people from their homeland is detrimental to the United States, to the Israeli people themselves, and to the cause of world peace.

By undoing the wrong they originally did to the Palestinians, the Israeli Jews will be able to live in peace and achieve security

There is no other way.

The Politics of Inflation

Rocks were thrown in the streets of Israeli cities, and men battled the police. It was, as violence in the Holy Land is usually measured, only a minor manifestation. Yet it pitted Israeli against Israeli, and the enemy was not the Arab, but skyrocketing prices and the stern measures being taken by the government to control them. And, in its way, it was an example of the politics of inflation, a kind of politics which is afflicting so many nations today.

Inflation has been a serious problem for many months now, in virtually every country. It has often been an election issue, in lands that take their elections seriously. But almost nowhere, even in those countries, has there been a clear mandate for any concrete program to bring prices into some kind of stability. So into the political vacuum, forms of direct action are moving.

The forms vary widely; so does the degree of vacuum in which they operate. In Israel, the government was composed largely upon issues stemming from the Yom Kippur warexcluding that most urgent one, inflation. But it has taken stringent actions, including a devaluation of the Israeli pound, restrictions on imports and food price increases. The demonstrations were against those actions. In France, President Giscard d'Estaing won a decisive victory at the polls-bot not for any specifically anti-inflationary program. He has instituted one which evoked admiration abroad. The unions, however, are striking in what ecems almost like a replay of the events of May, 1968, in slower tempo.

The Labor government won its victory in Britain with a plan to combat inflationlargely based on balancing off a "social contract" with the unions to keep down wage increases against nationalization and heavy taxes on wealth. But Labor'e parliamentary majority for such sweeping change is very slight, and tensions in Britain keep pace with price rises.

In the United States, the only significant anti-inflationary program on record is the mild one put forward by President Ford. Democrats argue that this was rejected by their victory last week-hot as yet they have no substitute, and little prospect of producing one through the normal congressional process. And in the meanwhile, the coal miners, with all the additional clout that their product has won through the energy crisis, are working out their own answer to their own problems in negotiations backed by the threat of a devastating strike. Fighting inflation is never politically popular. But it is becoming more and more apparent that unless political answers are found to the problem, apolitical answers -the strike, the riot-will increase. And the social strains created thereby are never conducive to wise, long-range solutions that enable a government to fit a national economy into a global situation.

Journey Into the Unknown

Henry Kissinger's latest odyssey carried him through regions he had visited before, to deal with problems that, in essence, were familiar to him-and to most of his predecessors in the State Department. Yet, so swift are the surface changes of this automated world that in a very real sense it was a journey into the unknown. And while he returned with words of hope-outward optimism is a necessary attribute of most diplomacy-whatever concrete progress Mr. Kissinger made will also be unknown for some time to come.

The secretary of state touched down in 17 countries in 18 days no small feat in itself. Some were simply refueling points, either for his plane or for his policy, or calls to extend courtesies to those who might have been annoyed by his more substantial discussions elsewhere. There was a dramatic interpolation into his schedule, followed by its even more dramatic cancellation, when the Turks decided that their internal politics would not allow them to take up the Cyprus question.

And, of course, there was the perennial Middle Eastern dilemma, sharpened by the new prominence accorded the Palestinian issue. This thorny tangle of oil and religion, of ancient history and modern power politics, of territorial claims and conflicting human rights, doubtless occupied much of Mr. Kissinger's attention, whether in Moscow or Tunis, or most of the way stops in between.

Mr. Kissinger did say, on his return, that he believed an "impasse had been averted" in the Middle East. Given what the world knows of the intentions of most of the parties to the contest there, this would be a major accomplishment. For the Arabs are backing the Palestine Liberation Organization; the movement has set no bounds to its claims on all of the territory once known as Palestine, and the Israelis refuse to negotiate with the PLO. The Soviet Union still wants to throw the whole mess into the hopper at Geneva, while the American position is that as much progress on details as possible should be made before such a massive confrontation. It is not, on its face, a happy situation.

Yet Mr. Kissinger has won personal audiences, and personal respect from most of the contending parties. In the United States and elsewhere his individual brand of diplomacy has attracted criticism and calls for a greater institutionalization of policy which will not require the President's chief agent in foreign affairs to spread himself so thin. Obviously, for the long haul, this will be essential. There can be no indispensable men in such positions-life is short but the art of shaping and conducting policy is (or should be) long.

In the present circumstances, however, there is much to be said for Mr. Kissinger's techniques, for capitalizing, to the utmost extent possible, upon his talents and his mystique. He may not be able to achieve major miracles of statecraft, but if he can keep that craft afloat in the turmoil of complex emotions that seems to rule so many capitals today, the accomplishment will be one in which Americans can take pride, and for which the world can be grateful.

Arms for Sale: Western Europe

West Europe's interest in tightening Atlantic tiee is about to be tested in a most concrete and far-reaching way. Will the allies -at first Belgium, Denmark, Norway and the Netherlands, and later others-buy American or French combat jets to replace their aging American F-104s? The economic stakes are huge: many hundreds of planes, thousands of jobs, billions of dollars. The political stakes are scarcely less significant. Purchase of the Dassault F-1M-53 Mirage would signify a rallying of Europe around France and around the French policy of a Europe standing apart from the United States. Purchase of either the General Dynamics YF-16 or the Northrop YF-17, which are having their own vigorous competition for large sales to the Pentagon, would mean a European decision to increase dependence upon the United States.

Which plane is the better militarily does not seem to trouble many people, though a former French Air Force chief of staff did scandalize his government the other day by saying that the two American aircraft are "unquestionably euperior" to the Mirage. Economic arguments seem to have taken on much more prominence. General Dynamics and Northrop have both offered to license some production in Europe—that is, to provide jobs as well as planes-if either's product is chosen. (A fourth competitor, Sweden, whose neutrality alone keeps it oot of the running in NATO arms sales, had offered to build auto plants for its plane's buyers!) In this intense struggle of rival

isters on both sides of the Atlantic have become hucksters. The political issue remains paramount.

The United States, not so discreetly waving the American strategic umbreila, advises Europeans that selection of an American plane would not only enhance NATO military capability but "would be favorably received by the U.S. Congress as a demonstration of The allies'l willingness to undertake burden sharing." This is no small consideration in a period of international litters alternating with visions of an enduring "détente." Either way, there is a danger of diminishing American interest in a continuing involvement in Europe's defense. The French, who are in the ambiguous position of wishing to equip others for a military organization that they themselves have spurned, respond that Europe must "count on itself to organize itself." In a period of economic uncertainty, when the cooperation of the members of the Common Market is under heavy strain. this is also no small consideration. It may never have been harder to be a European in the modern sense of the word.

We would add only that Europe is exactly the right place for the United States to be peddling arms. The Europeans are old -and reasonably reliable-friends and their purchases serve both Atlantic solidarity and East-West stability. None of the reservations we have about selling arms in the Persian Gulf apply in Europe.

For the hundreds of us in Paris, whether American, Frenct. or of other nations, who knew William Gardner Smith, his death of cancer at the age of 47 is a sharp and poignant loss. Bill Smith was a man of courage, intelligence, wit and charm. As his books testify, he traveled far beyond his hirthplace in South Philadelphia while staying true to his origins. His political sense, rooted in the outrages he knew at first hand, was tempered by a shrewd awareness of how all political men will behave. A man of the left, he came to see through many of the pretentions and fallacies associated with that position but remained a staunch opponent of what he saw as oppression and exploitation.

Those of us who knew and admired him as a friend and colleague cannot but feel diminished by his death. Considering his life in a larger framework, I, for one, must regret that this "native

Time to Talk

Israel and the PLO

By Stephen S. Rosenfeld

WASHINGTON.—Israel and the Palestine Liberation Organization need to get together to discuss the terms on which they could recognize each other. A cooling-off period after the PLO's imminent appearance at the United Nations will be necessary, and then some further time for feeling out, but if a fifth Arab-Israeli war is to be avoided, this may be the only way.

Yitzhak Rabin, Premier of Israel, insists that his country won't deal with "terrorists" who are openly dedicated in their of-ficial charter to Israel's destruction. But the real issue is not whether Israel will negotiate with Palestinian terrorists—of course it won't, and it should not be expected to, and "ter-rorists" aren't interested in negotiating, anyway. The real issue is whether Israel will negotiate with a Palestinian political leadership which in turn is prepared to negotiate with

Progress

Here one must take in the emerging cyldence that the Palestinians are prepared to deal with Israel. The "radical" Palestinian groups split off from the PLO in September in protest against its collaboration in "the Geneva plot," that "plot" being the collective Arab decision to recognize Israel, though not to deal nor-mally with Israel. At the recent Arab summit at Rabat, the PLO agreed to go to Geneva when the Mideast settlement couference there resumes. In terms of where the PLO began, this is real progress.

At the same time, for anyone concerned with the welfare of Israel, this is not enough. As long as the PLO formally endorses the dismantling of the Israeli state and as long as it condones terror, there can be no Israeli-Palestinian settlement,

The best thing Israel could do to belp ensure that the PLO does move in an "Israeli" direction, however, is to acknowledge the positive steps the PLO already has taken and thereby to demonstrate to the 'moderate' PLO leaders now in command that there is something for them at the end of the political road.

Anxieties

The best thing the PLO could do in turn to evoke this kind of positive Israeli response to Palestinian nationalism would be to demonstrate an understanding of the Israelis' anxieties about their survival hardly an unfair exchange. Rewriting the PLO charter would be one step, leash-ing terrorists another.

Israel, to be sure, is having trouble swallowing the fact that for the first time in its history there may be a Palestinian "partner" with which to draw up a settlement. A lot of Israelis had hoped to postpone this issue in-definitely, or at least until Egypt if not also Syria had been dealt with. Some still believe that tame Palestinians in Jordan or the West Bank can be located Others think Israel has the wherewithal to endure one or two more wars over the next decade, after which the oil crisis -which is the source of the immense pressure on Israel now. will be over. Acts of Palestinian terror and blood-curdling Arab talk etrengthen this Israeli inclination to gird for battle. So do cold Western words and deeds indicating to Israelis that to the West oil is more important than whether they live or die-this is

Interpreting Sino-Soviet Signals

By Victor Zorza

which causes so many officials, in Washington as well as significance of the warmer climate between Moscow and Peking could cause them to miss a truly historic turn of events. The recon-cliation between Russia and China which is now taking shape could be as important for the world as the Sino-Soviet conflict was when it finally emerged in the open in the early 1960s, after simmering under the surface for several years.

The halting steps toward some sort of reconciliation became clearly visible when Peking began to play down the danger of war with Russia more than a year ago. The new Peking slogan proclaimed that Russia was making only "a feint to the East" while threatening the West-but it was accompanied, somewhat inconsistently, by the old accusations that Moscow was also preparing an attack on China. Most Western analysts chose to regard Peking's talk of an attack as significant, and to dismiss the new theme as mere propaganda,

But it was propaganda with a difference. Peking was giving Moscow a choice. The Kremlin could respond to the new slogan or ignore it. Moscow sent back a number of positive signals, but these were overlaid by the menacing noises generated by the continuing Peking power struggle. The reconciliation with Russia is obviously a major issue in the power struggle, and the anti-Soviet noises made by the hardline faction in the Chinese leader ship were wrongly regarded in the West as a rejection of Soviet overtures by Peking.

Practical Politics

More recently, however, Peking's preoccupation with a sudden So-viet attack on China has greatly diminished. Chinese leaders have instead taken to telling foreign visitors that the Soviet Union was not going to make war on China in the near future. This could only mean that those who last year coined the slogan and the "feint to the East" had since prevailed in the Peking struggle, and that the prospect of reconciliation implied in the slogen a year ago had now become matter of practical politics.

The latest Chinese message of greetings to Moscow on the October Revolution anniversary,

The in other capitals, to deny the analysts who last year refused to. attach any importance to the early signals cannot easily switch tracks now. But higher officials who nourish Henry Kissinger's view that a reconciliation is unlikely are taking upon themselves a major political responsibility, as did the officials who told the West's leaders in the late 1950s that there was no such thing as a Sino-Soviet conflict.

The articles, which had argued that "friction between Moscow and Peking is just beginning, but it may yet become the most significant development in the long cold war that lies ahead," were based on much the same kind of evidence as the material which led me to write, more than a year ago, that signs of a Sino-Soviet reconciliation were not becoming apparent. The fact that I was right in 1959 does not necmake me right now. But the fact that most government

MUSIC IN PARIS

Chamber Ensembles in Unexpected Places

By David Stevens

PARIS, Nov. 11 (IHT).-The congenial and convenient formula of the concert that begins at 6:30 p.m. and runs for an hour or so without intermission has demonstrated its popularity here in the last few seasons, with the result that this season is being enriched by two highly attractive chamber-music series in unexpected precincts.

The idea is appealing in several ways. For one thing, there is a vast and often little-known repertory that can only be played by small, ad hoc ensembles. The hour and the repertory tend to attract a musical and informal audience, rather than a social one. The whole etmosphere is one of delight in music-making among friends-involving, as it does in many cases, an outlet for musicians who toll in the reletive anonymity of an opera house pit or the ranks of an orchestra.

Last week, an organization calling itself Musique et Musiciens launched a series of Tuesday con-certs in the Salle Bleue of the mammoth Palais des Congrès-which has 700 comfortable seats (more than balf-filled for the first concert) and warm acmistics Handy, too, since a number of the musicians involved are members of the Orchestre de Paris, which frequently has Tuesday night concerts in the big hall only an elevator ride awey. The prime movers of Musique et Musiclens seem to be a pair of flutists, Jean-Pierre Rampal end Micbel Debost, who appropriately launched the new series by chasing each other with impectrio for two flutes and cello (Paul Boufil). no stone unturned to reach a The program was completed by Brahms's Trio for piano, clarinet and cello, strongly played by Ciaude Lavoix, Jacques Di Donato and Alain Meunier, then Mozart's Serenade in E flat for winds, with oboist Maurice Bourgue and seven of his Orchestre de Paris colleagues ending proceedings on an alert and cheerful note.

The Paris Opéra is not precisely the first place that a chambermusic lover would turn to. But Rolf Liebermann has been leaving broader public for Garnier's pompous palace, nor has he missed any opportunity to promote the reputation of the musicians on the house payroll.

As it happens, the Paris mosical scene includes a number of ensembles made up of performers in the Opera's orchestra. So, on six Sundays during the season, one or another of these groups is occupying a platform built over the orchestra pit to perform chamber music. Last night, the second in the series offered the Octuor de Paris in a program that comprised the Schubert Octet, which alone is the raison d'etre for the existence of such an ensemble, and Iannis Xenakis's "Anaktoria," which reversed the order of things by having heen written for this ensemble five years ago.

The orchestra level was filled for this concert, with some over-flow into the first level of boxes, a substantial turnout (about 600) yet an intimate atmosphere. A number of people lingered afterward, necks craned, suggesting that the 10-franc admission makes these concerts the cheapest way to get a good look at Chagall's ceiling.

This is how the New York by Frank Dunlop and Jim Dale Times critics rate new films and stage productions.

Plays

"The Beauty Part," by S.J. Perelman, is being revived by the American Place Theater, just 12 years after its first performance. Perhaps this revival is a little premature, for, says Clive Barnes, "This mixture of philistinism, cynicism and vulgar name-dropping... seems old and tired." The story concerns a hero who leaves his rich father and stalks through the world of culture, eventually concluding that money is the hest thing in life. There are a few promising vaudeville-style situations concerning characters with catchy names, (Rob Roy Fruitwell, for example, hut the spectator soon rejects them as shallow carlcatures. One must remember, however, that when Perelman's lines are hiessed with the delivery of a master comedian, they are immensely effective. Bert Lahr is a case in point, and Groucho Marx also transformed lines not particularly funny in themselves but, as Barnes remarks, "hilarious when strained through a mustache, a cigar and a wickedly offensive leer." Unfortunately for Perelmen, neither of these two master comics are available for "The Beauty Part." Joseph Bova in the leading male role finds the strain of following in Lahr's footsteps too much for him, and indeed the whole production leaves a good deal to be desired. This is unfortunate, for

to be commended, Barnes says. "The Adventures of Scapino!", despite the comparative failure of this production, the policy of the American Place Theater in offering an occasional revival is has ended up on Broadway in having been previously produced in a variety of locations. However, tbe production on a conventional stage in no way detracts from the success of the piece, which, says Barnes. "is one of the fun-mest and certainly the most original show in town." Jim Dale and his largely American cast make the production a huge success in "a lovely performance that gets even better with familiarity" where "the exuberant Dale continues to run over the seats like a berserk mountain goat, and addresses the audience with un-abashed cockiness." Barnes, obviously taken with the show, says, "If you haven't yet seen it, take your chance now, and while you are taking your chance, take

"Mourning Pietnres" by Honor Moore is about the last days of a 50-year-old woman who has cancer. Her death is seen through the eyes of her eldest daughter, Maggie, a 27-year-old poet. Clive Barnes presumes the play is auto-biographical "particularly as it has been written from such a painfully individual viewpoint. ... I am not convinced that this very personal memorial should bave been opened to the public." The critic goes on to say that the playwright must transform death, must do more than document the charts of feeling. He must illuminate them, explain and comment. To fail to do this is to present the trutl. with self-pity, and finally that is what this play does." One of the play's merits is that the family seems "awfully nice." Kay Carney directed the production, which is at the Lyceum.

"The Little Prince" based on the late Antoine de Saint-Exupéry's fable, is a very exasperating experience, says Vincent Canhy. "It's the kind of movie that refers to adults as grownups to show us where it means its sympathles to be. Yet it's too abstract and sophisticated to be of interest to most children, and too simple-mindedly mystic and smug to charm even the most indulgent adult. You don't have to be W.C. Fields to want to swat it."

It was directed by Stanley Donen, who has been responsible for some of the most impressive film musicals ever produced, including "Singing in the Rain," as Canhy points out. The critic finds it virtually impossible that anyone could make a satisfactory movie out of the tiny Saint-Exupéry book, "a fable about a pilot who crash-lands in the Sahara where, while he repairs his plane, he is befriended by a small extraterrestrial boy who happens to be on a sight-seeing tour of the universe." The discuss the boy's experiences at some length, and nothing much hip-pens. The film, which only lasts 88 minutes, seems at least five times as long. "When Richard Kiley, who plays the pilot, races across the Sahara singing (in very good voice) a new Lerner-Loewe love song, Donen photographs him from what seems to have been a swooping helicopter." Canby says. "The song will sound great in the sound-track album, but the actor, seen alternately in long shots and close-ups, appears to have lost his mind." In another scene, Bob Fosse, dressed as the poisonous snake who takes more like "a 19th-century Chicago pimp".

He said oil-using nations, should combine with the urgency, confidence and intelligence that, in an earlier crisis, accompanied and sustained the Marshall Plan."

Such unity has been sorely lacking, Sen. Jackson said. "The Atlantic Alliance, having as-sembled itself on the parade ground of common purpose, proceeded to march off in as many directions as there were marchers," he said,

In an implied criticism of al Rules Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, Sen. Jackson said that "in

Now, he said, "it is time that the consumer nations did something for themselves." Sen. Jackson proposed a 10-point agenda for the finance ministers council, simed initially at "efforts to bring world oil prices down." He advocated "a tough program to limit demand through manda-tory energy conservation"—specifically including gasoline rationing. Several other points would be aimed at boosting oil production among oil-using states. Spain Easing Law to Boost Alien Investment

By John A. Jones

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 11.— U.S. businessmen who look south of the border for new fields of investment may be forgetting one Spanish-speaking country worth their atten-

A group of five Spanish bankers visited Los Angeles recently on the first mission of its kind from Spain to the West Coast, to tell businesmen that their country is now ready for the kind of heavy industrial development that surged through other West European nations in the 1950s. "We think Spain today is one of the last not fully developed major consumer markets in Europe," said Narciso Andreu in an interview. "In the last 10 years, Spain has been like a country that has been built

Mr. Andreu is a senior officer of Bankunion, part of the Banco Atlantico grown It is the Spanish affiliate of Continental Illinois National Bank & Trust Co. of

More than 250 U.S. companies already have made use of Spain's relatively low-cost labor, tax incentives and other government aid to invest $370 million there, about one-third of all foreign investments. Soon a change in Spanish law will make Spain an even better bet for foreign investors, said Juan Liado, managing director of Banco Atlantico and another member of the group visiting here.

The new law, he said, will clarify some ambiguities in previous government regulations of foreign investment. When the new regulations become law-probably within two weeks-foreign investors will have a green light to buy up to 50 per cent of any company in Spain, either directly or through the stock market. They also will be free to take home all profits in the form of distributed dividends on the stock. If a foreign investor sells his stock, he will be free to repairiate all his capital.

"In the real estate business, for example," Mr. Llado said, "it used to be difficult if not impossible for a foreign investor to repatriate capital gains from real estate

The new law also will permit branch operations by foreign companies in Spain, and allow partnerships or joint ventures the same 50-per-cent investment limit.

Mr. Llado said.

Spain has many of the same problems that other countries in Europe have, Mr. Andreu said, "including inflation and oil imports. Ninety per cent of our cil comes from the Persian Gulf."

However, Spain's currency reserves of about $6.4 billion are still enough to cover eix months' imports, Mr. Andreu said. In 1965, he added, Spain became one of the first European countries to begin using nuclear power. The biggest asset, however, is the emcr-gence of a stable middle-class in Spain nuring the past 15 years, the bankers said. Per capita income has grown to $1,600 in 1973 from $290 in 1960, they said, but Spatn's 35 million people consume only 25 to 40 per cent of the goods other West Europeans buy, leaving a strong potential, market for consumer goods. "A hidden resource of the country is the workers who are living and working outside Spain, in Germany, Switzerland and other countries" where job opportunitles are better, Mr. Llado said. Although unemployment in Spain is low, the bankers said many of the country's expatriate workers would likely return home if jobs were opened up for them.

The Spanish government is encouraging development of new industries in outlying areas, with subsidies of up to 10 per cent of the capital needed for development,

And the Banco Atlantico group has applied for authority to open a Spanish-Arab Investment Bank in partnership with Kuwara so that Spain could be a conduit for Arab investment in African and Latin-American countries.

The banking group also plans to open an agency in New York in the first quarter of 1975, Mr. Llado said—the first such Spanish agency in the United States-"and we are definitely thinking about coming to the West Coast" with a similar agency later on.

Canadians Are Upset by Inflow of U.S., European Banks

By William Borders TORONTO, Nov. 11 (NYT) -Lared by the prospect of politfeal stability and great mineral wealth, bankers from the United States and other countries are flooding into Canada—and the Canadians are not quite sure now

To the dismay of the Canadian financial community, there are now perhaps 150 foreign-affiliated banking offices in this countrytwice as many as there were just a couple of years ago—and scarce-ly a week goes by without a new one opening up in one of the sleek new glass towers of downtown Toronto or Montreal

Gold Ownership Seen Doubtful in U.S. by Dec. 31

LONDON, Nov. 11 (Reuters) .-U.S. government sources here said Treasury Secretary William Simon is considering asking Con-gress to postpone beyond the present Dec. 31 deadline permission for private American citi-zens to own and trade in gold. The sources said e recent statement by a U.S. Treasury official that ownership would be permit-ted from that date should not interpreted as a commitment the administration.

The sources believe that Federal Reserve Board chairman Arthur Burns, as well as Mr. Simon, may presently have reservations about the legislated Dec. 31 date.

Last week the Treasury issued a letter to a Washington law firm which said U.S. gold ownerhip would begin on that date. But the sources here said: "It is by no means certain that the administration will in fact be willing to go shead with private ownership on this date." Any delay in the date for U.S. gold ownership would have to be approved by Congress, and it is be approved even if strenuous arguments were put forward by Treasury Secretary Simon.

Meanwhile, Commodity Ex change Inc. said today it will begin trading in gold futures on paign.

China's surging demand for all sorts of machinery and other capital equipment can be met only if the country is willing to import more than it can possibly sell im-mediately to foreigners.

China's Foreign Trade Minister

Li Chiang recently stressed that China would never "grovel for-foreign loans" to finance its rising import needs. But he also conceded that "methods of pay-ment are negotiated in the light of common international practice" in several recent transactions. These "methods" have clearly involved deferred payment by the Chinese for imported equipment. Oil also seems to play a key role in Chine's new wiltingness to go into debt for imported products.

Inc. And S.A. and Ltd. and GmbH — you see the key ones every day in the advertising columns of the International Herald Tribune.
For this is the paper the significant Europeans read — and this is the audience significant corporate advertisers are talking to.

Ads.

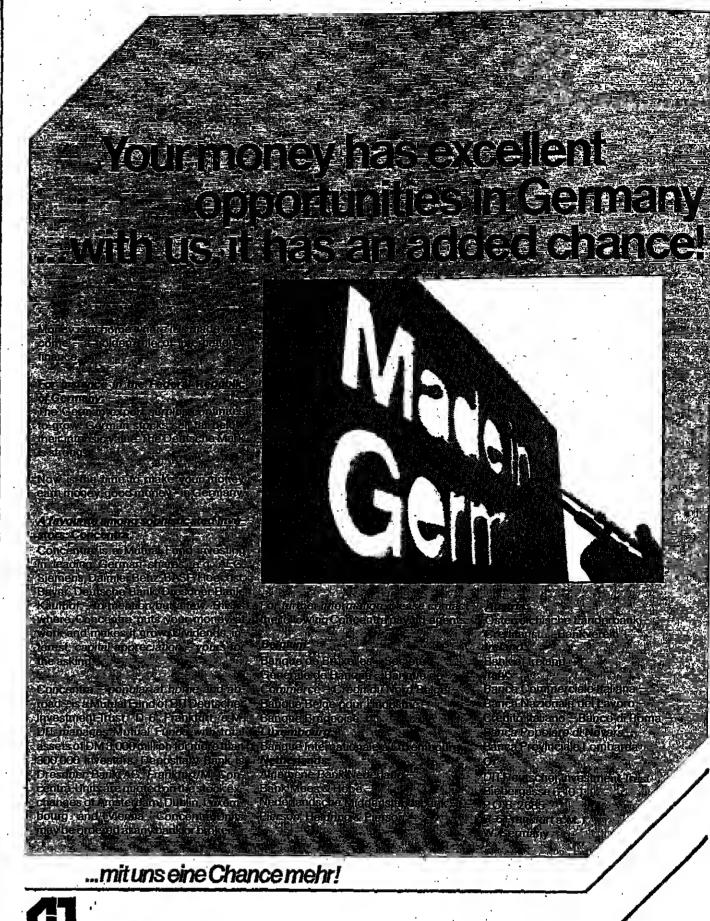

It's fun to read the ads in the Herald Tribune — for people, places, goods and services all over Europe, all over the world.

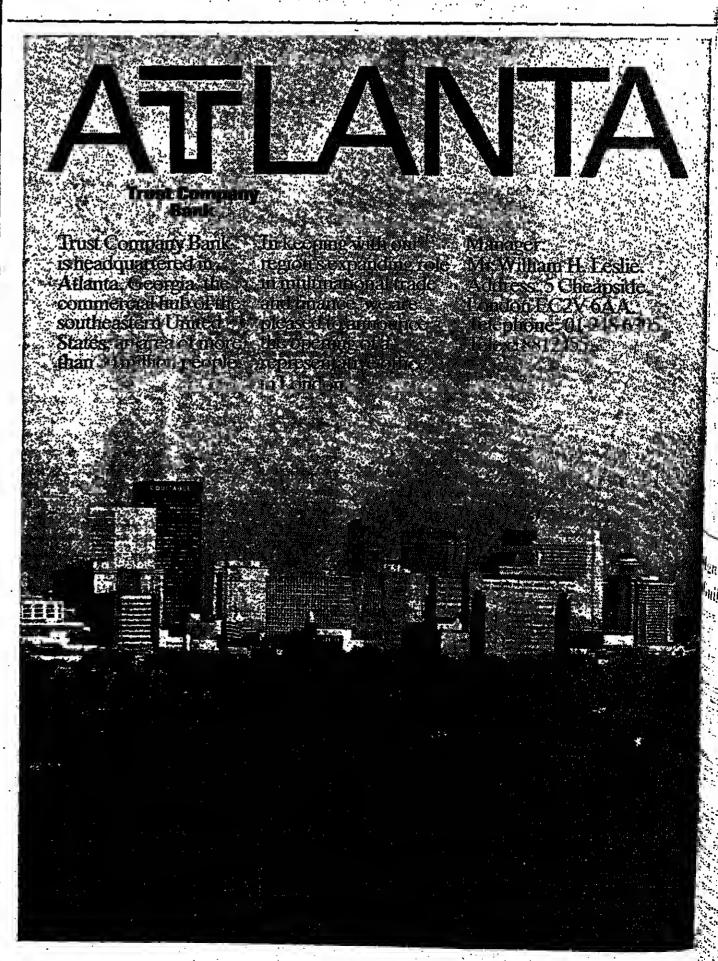

And if you want to place an ad — a single « Personal nitem or a whole campaign — no better medium than the Trib. Rates are reasonable.

Food.
The fine art of good eating is a favorite European pastime — and gournets eat up the Tribune's food articles.

Where to eat what, and for how much, is covered regularly in the feature pages of the Inter-national Herald Tribune.

As a whole Western Europe is a place with limitless business possibilities.

But it's also a number of very different countries which tend to complicate things

Imagine having to deal separately with an Austrian bank, a Belgian bank, a Dutch bank, a French bank, a German bank and an Italian bank to name but a few possibilities.

That won't be easy. But it won't be necessary if your business is with Midland Bank, a great British bank.

We can take care of the financial side of your business for the whole of Europe.

We have correspondent relationships with over 1,000 banks in Western Europe alone.

We're participants in a European banking group which will give you access to full service banking facilities at almost 9,000 branches.

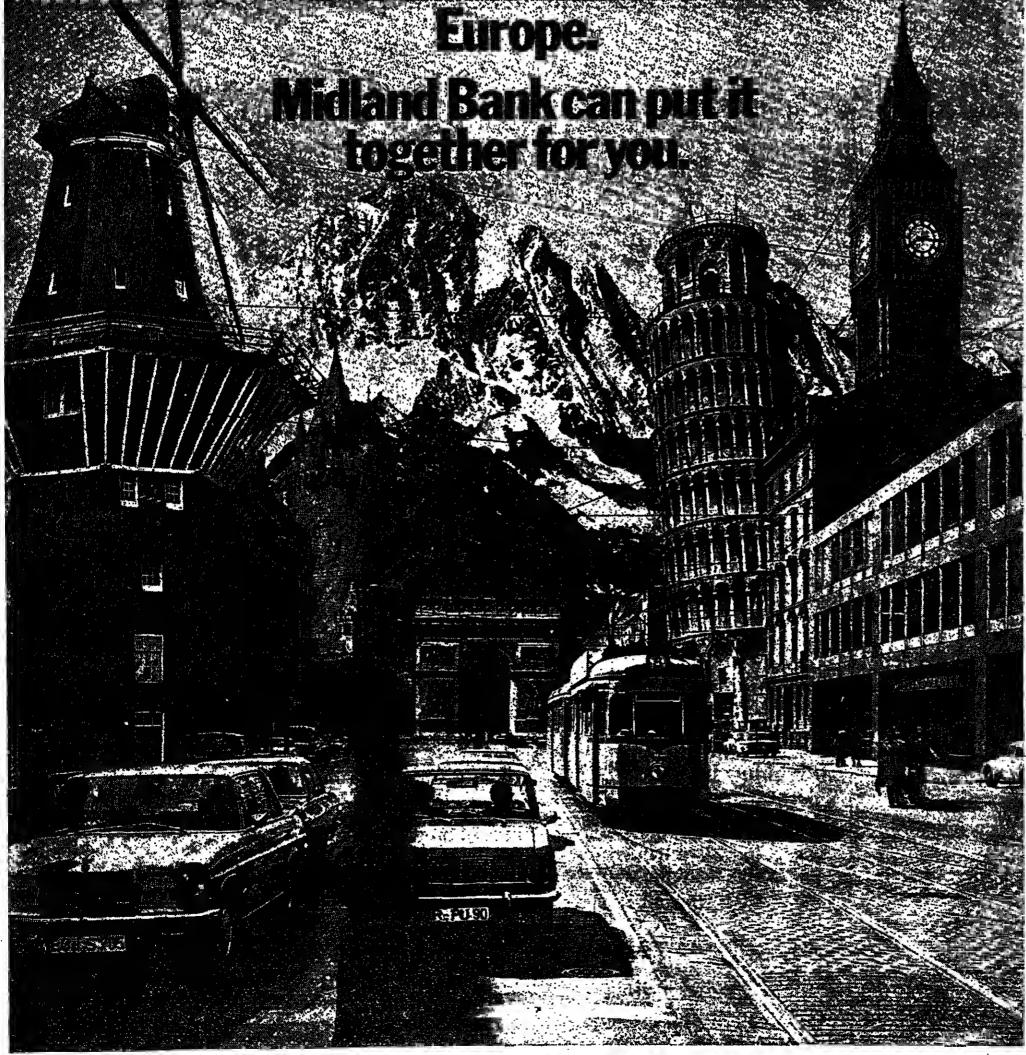

And in Britain, with over 3,200 branches we're as powerful a bank group as you

All of which makes a strong case for getting something started here even if it's only a financial headquarters. To help you in that direction we'd like to send you a 32 page brochuse that in general terms tells you all you need to know about setting up in Bestain.

To get your copy write to: Mr. F. O. Dunphy, Midland Bank, Room 50, 60 Gracechurch St., London EC3P 3BN. England.

If you bank with the Midland, you're in business in Europe.

A banker can be more useful than a bank.

However well organized, a bank never has the intuition, accessability or dynamism of the individual banker. A bank has no imagination. It will not call to your attention new business opportunities in Tokyo or Sao Paulo. And it will not come up with innovative solutions to financing problems, but the individual banker can.

At Bankers Trust Paris, we are a small team of bankers, trained in international markets, on the look out for the services our bank can offer you. In France or any other part of the world.

We are bankers capable of sharing your enthusiasm for your projects, of suggesting formulas best adapted to your development in France or abroad: we can provide such services as local or euro financing, buyers' or sellers' credits, foreign exchange, discovery of far away markets.

Bankers capable also of stopping you in time, if advisable, before putting in motion the banking institution without which, it must be admitted, there would be neither business nor bankers.

Bankers Trust.

Bankers Trust, 2 Avenue Montaigne, welcomes you to the wide world of Bankers Trust. Claude E. de Messières - General Manager - Tél. 256.62.62

THE EBONY TOWER By John Fowles. Little. Brown, 312 pp. $7.95.

Reviewed by Christopher Lehmann-Haupt

"THE working title of this col-lection of stories was "Vari-ations"—John Fowles interjects in "A Personal Note" about one third of the way through his new book, 'The Ebony Tower'—"by which I meant to suggest variations both on certain themes in previous books of mine and in methods of narrative presenta-

But two considerations seemed to militate against using "Vari-ations" as a title. Mr. Fowles goes on to explain: first, his own fear that readers would "feel themselves at a disadvantage because they are unfamiliar with my work..." And, second, the fear of "the first professional readers" of the book that these readers" of the book that these "Variations" were only visible in "a private mirage in the writer's mind." Well, after reading Mr. Fowles's new book, one realizes that neither he nor "the first professional readers" need really have worreaders need for the fifth and last story in the collection, "The Cloud," the fictions in "The Ebony Tower" do work independently both of one another and of the author's earlier novels, "The Collector." "The Magua." and "The French Lieutenant's Woman" (not to mention his collection of aphorisms, "The Aristus: A Self-Portrait in Ideas"). Yet one can understand why he wanted to call them "Variations" for the book does call to mind certain themes from his earlier works, and the interrelationships between the stories make the fun of reading them all the greater.

For instance, one comes away from the long title piece fully satisfied with the tale it tells of a young art critic named David Williams who visits an old, self-exiled English painter. Henry Breasley, in his rural French retreat and falls to act on his attraction to one of the old painter's two young female

Yet amusing puzzles persist after David has returned to his conventional marriage and the story of his temptation is done. What is the meaning, we wonder, of the reference to Marie France and eliduc (whatever that may be), and why all the talk about "the mystery of island Britain filtering all over Europe via its French namesake? What's the significance of the weasel that David runs over while driving away from Henry Breasley's estate? And what exactly did the old painter mean when he implied that the abstract artists he so abominates live in an "ebony tower" is opposed to an ivory tower)?

Sufficient unto itself, too, is the second story, a translation of a medieval tale called "Eliduc" by one Marie de France (shal), about an honorable knight ha-holden to two ladies (aha); one of whom is awakened from an endless sleep by a rose taken from the mouth of a weard (ahal). "Eliduc" is a charming exercise in scholarship, to be sure, but we begin to see that Mr. Fowles is after more than charm: "One may smile conde-scendingly at the naiveté and primitive technique of stories such as 'Eliduc,' "he writes in "A Personal Note," "but I do not think any writer of liction do so with decency-and for a very simple reason. He is watching his own birth.

Only the final story, "The Cloud," does not stand independently. With its confusing cast of characters (I had to draw a chart to get everyone straight and even so I was stuck with a leftover "David." who is either a misprint or an echo of the young biographer in the title story), its fragmented style, and its barely coherent plot-line, it forces the reader to look elsewhere for its manning.

My theory is that it represents Mr. Fowles himself trying to escape from "the ebony tower-trying to paint with words as if he were Henry Breasley apprehending reality without caping into abstraction.

I'll even gamble to say "The Cloud" is a verbal rendering of a painting-in-progress that start in Henry Breasley's studio— painting that "put into word: [was] a pessimistic truism abou the human condition." That' highly debatable, of course, bu debate it many readers will.

For, as he has done so ofter in the past, John Fowles ha book that is at once a thoroughly pleasing entertainment and thoroughly mystifying communication abook that for my mone at least is the most enjoyable piece of fiction to be published so far this season.

By Alan Truscott

There are times when it helps to know whether an opponent is a competent defender. If he is an unknown, put at your table by the tide of tournament play, he may already have furnished a clue to his ability.

On the diagramed deal from the regional masters-pairs play at Albany N.Y. a week ago. South could have been forced to assess West's ability. The contract was an optimistic three no-trump, reached after South had opened one no-trump and North had made a response of three diamonds, nonforcing in his style. West led the club king, and made a foolish play at the second trick by continuing with the club jack. This was a play that could not gain a trick, and was very likely to lose. He may have been misled by the nonappearance of the deuce on the first trick, which South had carefully concessed, but he should have recognized that there was no hurry for clubs. If East held the queen, those tricks could waitbarring the unlikely event that East held the spade ace and the club queen, and South could take nine quick tricks in the red suits.

A heart shift was indicated which would have defeated th contract even if the declarer four the double-dummy way to mak three spade tricks by leading th eight and running it. South won a trick with th club queen, and took full advan tage of the opportunity offered t

The diamond jack was run the third trick, and when Far won with the queen, he shifted t the king and led three diamon winners to produce this position

South drew a spade and West heart. It was now likely the West was keeping the guarde spade king, so South entered h hand with a heart lead to the so He then led a club giving We his two tricks in that suit making two spade tricks at end and his contract.

If West had briskly thro away two small spedes, unguard ing the king, South might hat gone astray, arguing that a may who would lead the club jack ? the second trick would see no res son to unguard the spade kin later.

But this is purely hypothetical A man who would unguard the spade king, tempting South v finesse or make a throw-in play would not have made the taid two blunder. It is safe to assume that nobody will be a dunce on moment and a genius the next

Minnesota at St. Louis ST. LOUIS, Nov. 11 (UPI).—
Although his physical status has risen from doubtful to questionable to probable. Terry Metcaif said yesterday that it is "still up in the air" whether he will play when the St. Louis Cardinals meet Minnesota tonight.

Metcalf, a 5-foot-10, 185-pound second-year man, has provided the big plays which led St. Louis to a 7-1 record. He was injured early in the second quarter of last week's game with Dallas, and his absence gutted the Car-dinal offensive punch. St Louis saw its winning streak ended by a 20-yard field goal with four seconds left, which gave the Cowboys a 17-14 victory.

The injury first was diagnosed as a strained ligament in his right knee, but Metcalf says it appears to be a flareup of an injury which kept him out three weeks last season.

Italy Warms Up for the Netherlands

By Brian Glanville

LONDON, Nov. 11 (IHT) .-"Play me in the national team again!" cries Jose Altafini, who is still, at "6, scoring goals for Juventus.

"One half, no more, That's all I ask. Just a friendly, if you like, in Italy."

But that decision is up to Fulvio Bernardini, the 68-year-old manager of the waning Italian National team which Wednesday plays Bayern Munich in a warm-up match in Rome, preparatory to its ordeal next week in Rotterdam, when the Netherlands must be met in the European Nations Cup.

Although they lost by only 1-0 in Zagreh against Yugoslavia, Bernardini does not pretend that Italy's performance was any-thing but a disaster. Still worse was the humiliating 1-1 draw in a 70-minute match in Florence against the second division team Reggiana, which added insult by packing its side with reserves in the closing stages.

No Gigi Riva That day, Bernardini ordered his men, conditioned for years to marking man to man, to mark zonall-, and of course it did not work. Time has run out. There is no Gigi Riva to rely upon for goals out of the blue. The Ca-gliari striker is still injured.

golden boy inside-forward, is, at 20, still too inexperienced to pick up a match, like that against Holland, by the scruff of the neck. If he does play, it will be his first international match.

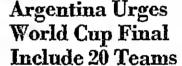

Bernardini says that he positively will not close up in defense and look for a 1-1 draw, as Barcelona did when it recently played on the same ground against Rotterdam in the European Cup. Even if he wanted to play a counter-punching game, Bernardini says, he has not the forwards to play it with. But he would have were he to call up the Brazilian-born Altafini, who under the nickname of Mazzola represented Brazil in Sweden in the 1958 World Cup. We still cannot understand Bernardini's insistence on excluding the real Mazzola, San-drino—after whose distinguished father Valentino Altafini was nicknamed—and Gienni Rivera. One wants the old dog for the hard road. There are far too many ifs and buts about the present Italian team, and the pres-sure put upon it since the failures of the World Cup have not help-

Poland, meanwhile, which plays in the same group, is due to meet the Czechs in a friendly game Wednesday. This will be an interesting indication of whether Poland is improving after its poor start to the season, when both East Germany (now down in the hasement) and France best Poland at home.

Severe Treatment The young Czech team, which lost 3-0 to England at Wembley, was severely treated. Until it tired in the last 20 minutes, it looked quite capable of stealing the result on a breakaway goal. The Polish World Cup team would have eaten the Czechs at a gulp, but things, as manager

Kazimierz Gorski stresses, have changed since then. Gorgon, the big center-half, has put on too much weight. Zmuda, the other fine young stopper, has been suspended for wanting to leave Gwardia Warsaw without permission. Robert Gadocha is diseffected because his transfer to Bayern Munich and the sweet life of West Germany has been blocked by the Polish federation.

ROME, Nov. 11 (AP),-The 1978 World Soccer Cup final round should be played by 20 teams instead of 16, with the extra four spots taken almost surely by European or South American teams, Argentine offi cials said in Rome.

That is the proposal that Argentina, which will stage the tournament, will present in its meeting in Zurich next February with the World Cup Commission of the International Soccer Fed-

"We don't want to add secondrate teams, but we hate to see teams such as England, Spain, Russia or Czechoslovakia—just to mention the top European countries-left out of the World Cup," said Martin Noel, Argentina's delegate to the FIFA commission "Besides, we have worked out a formula that will limit the World Cup to 25 days with a maximum of seven matches per team, as in West Germany this year," Noel said. The World Cup final round has been played by 16 teams. They are: the defending champion, the host country, a team each from Africa, Asia and Central America, seven or eight European teams and three or four South American teams.

"When FIFA decided to have one team from Africa, Asia and Central America, they limited the number of European or South American teams," Noel said. "We want to increase them again."

Nov. 23, the Big 10 will be right. Ohio State was the last of the two teams to play in the Rose

A year ago, Ohio State and Michigan were unbeaten when they met and the game ended in a 10-10 tie. In a controversial vote hy telephone the next day. Onio State was sent to the Rose Bowl for the second straight year by a 8-4 ballot that exposed many of the political and personal animosities within the Big 10.

This time there will be a gathering of the Big 10 athletic directors the next day, Nov. 24. They will be face to face when they vote if Ohio State beats Michigan. Michigan State, which has one loss but also one tie in league play, is still in the running for the Rose Bowl. Too many improbable things must happen, however, for the Spartans to have

As if Michigan State sounded a call for a revolt against the powerful teams in the land, upsets began happening all across the nation Saturday shortly after Ohio State, the No. 1 team in the land, fell and coach Woody Haves threatened to punch a reporter, as usual

There was North Carolina State's surprising 12-7 victory over Penn State at Raleigh, N.C. But this did not bother the Cotton Bowl officials, who stuck to their promises to Penn State and invited the Nitlany Lions to meet a Southwest Conference team on New Year's Day. There was Southern Methodist's 18-14 upset of Texas A&M, the leader of the Southwest Conference. The Aggles had hopes of going against Penn State in that Cotton Bowl game. But the Aggies may still make it hecause there was Baylor's upset of Texas, 34-24, that put a crimp in the Longhorns' chances.

The Sugar Bowl became a bit less sweet when Florida, one of the New Orleans entries for New Year's Eve, was upset hy Georgia, 17-16, just a week after the Gators got the Sugar Bowl bid by beating Auburn in a big sur-

The only teams that seemed to get through the day without losing face were Alahama, Okiahoma and Michigan, the remaining unbeaten and untied powers of the land. Yale also held its perfect record by beating Penn,

U.S. Customs Say Missing Renoir Stolen in London

MINNEAPOLIS, Nov. 11 (AP) .--A missing Renoir painting insured for $150,000 is now presumed by authorities to have been stolen, U.S. Customs officials say.

The painting, "Lady in a Flowered Hat," belongs to Minneapolis attorney Samuel Masion. Customs officials said it was shipped by Masion to London for B possible sale, but was to be returned to the owner Aug. 8. It was placed on a plane bound for Detroit, where it was to be transferred to another plane for shipment to Minneapolis.

When the wooden case was delivered to Maslon, the 12-by-16 inch painting was missing. Customs officials said that they now are certain the painting was not stolen in Detroit or Minneapolis but apparently was taken before the plane left London,

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Gore Vidal: 'I'm No. 1'

By Sally Quina

WASHINGTON (WP)-"About every 18 months I empt," Gore Vidal said. "I go barnstorming across the country doing television and lectures, hawking my books. Then I go back to Rome, settle down to a nice quiet life and write." He is in Washington pushing "Myron," his latest novel, featuring the return of the trans-sexual protagonist of 'Myra Breckenridge."

Washington, of course, is Vidal's hometown. His mother, Nina Gore, was the daughter of Sen. T.P. Gore. She divorced Vidal's father, Eugene Vidal, when Gore was 10 and married Hugh Auchin-closs, the millionaire investment banker. The family moved to Merrywood, the Virginia estate overlooking the Potomac where they stayed until that marriage broke up six years later and Gore was replaced in his upstairs bedroom by Jacqueline Bouvier, whose mother, Janet, became Hugh Auchincloss's third wife. Anyway, that is how Gore Vidal is related to Jackie Kennedy Onassis. They both had the same stepfather. But they didn't meet right away. Vidal, now 49, went into the Army, then began travelling

It wasn't until Jackie Bouvier married Jack Kennedy that they really became friends. Jackie loved Gore Vidal. He is-and washandsome, witty, sexy, bisexual, brilliant, talented, successful, charming, courtly, well mannered, and perhaps the most bitchy gossio of Vidal liked the Kennedys, their glittering circle of friends, their talked-about salons.

There was only one problem. Many of the men in the Kennedy administration weren't too crazy about Gore Vidal. He had, after all, written that book, "The City and the Pillar," espousing bisexuality. It was considered a hit much. The late Robert Rennedy liked Vidal least of all. So one night at a White House party, Gore and Jackie were dancing very close together, so the story goes, when Bobby came over to them, pushed Gore away from Jackie, and told him never to dance with his sister-in-law that way egain.

Well, Vidal not one to take this sort of thing lying down, wrote a devastating piece about Bobby in Esquire, which started the whole ruthless Bobby image, and that was the end of Vidal's friendship with the Kennedys. Jackle stayed loyal to Bobby, and she and Vidal have not seen each other since. That was in 1962, recalls Vidal.

It didn't seem to bother Gore Vidal one bit. He just kept on writing his best-selling novels, being outrageous and provocative getting into victous fights with people on television and in print, and

Back in Washington, this time, he seemed, to some of his friends, a bit mellow. To others who had not known him before though he still had that famous tart tongue. And he says he doesn't ever get bored talking about the same things. "I'm fascinated talking about everything," ha said. "Except myself. Sometimes I do get bored talking about myself." He answers questions about his personal life in either a flip, detached way or with evasive one-liners. The impression he gives is one of a very professional, smooth, cynical, brilliant, world-weary, unemotional man. Which is, of course, the image he intends to

Nevertheless, he insists, "I am what I seem." He was not disappointing on this visit to Washington. He knows what people want to hear, what is commercial, what will titillate and what will sell. He glides through television interviews, his patter down to perfection. He carefully times his conversation to permit an interviewer to take copious notes. He understands the media and how to manipulate its members. He knows what he says will outrage, annoy and provoke the people he says things about. He does it humorously, purposefully, mischievously, inviting reaction. The insults he huris are more detached than personal, more stylized than serious. "I suppose

I am combative" he admits.

Here are a few of his observations for public consumption: · Jack Kennedy: "Jack was the most wonderful gossip. Much better than Jackie, probably because he had greater resources. But he was marvelous repository. We would have long rambles about girls in Hollywood. He knew everything. He was such fun. But his was a continuing search for attractive women. That always came first with Jack,"

 Jackje: "I never really knew Jackje that well. I enjoyed her though. She was quite bright. She knows who she is. Very few people do. That's why she's done very well. She wanted a fot of money. She got it. But I never profited by my connection with Jackie. In fact it was the reverse. When Jackie first started out as a reporter she went around claiming to be my sister and I hadn't even met her. She got all kinds of interviews with people by telling hem that. She profited a lot more from our relationship than I

• Lee Radziwill: 'Deeply boring. But being from a famous family is a bore. And it doesn't help for long. Lee found that out. If you have no talent, it shows. We all did have one thing in common. We had no money, contrary to what people think. Mr. Auchincless was very rich and our step brothers and sisters were rather well looked after. But we were not, and we had to survive out there in the world. That's why I had to work and Jackie and Lee had to marry well. But Merry-wood was so removed from the Depression that the girls never knew Ethel Kennedye "Ethel invented tacky."

· Arthur Schlesinger: "Arthur is the little boy always running after the crowd saying, 'Hey, let me play too.' Arthur was thrilled to be part of the Kennedy crowd." • The Kennedy era: "The Kennedys were great corrupters. And don't see anything wrong with that. They never had to buy any-any journalist in town." • Henry Kissinger: "I haven't the slightest interest in Henry at all. He's simply an apparatchik. He'll work for anybody. He's just brighter than most."

body. One chic dinner at the White House and you could have President Ford: "A right-wing loon." Norman Maller: "Norman really has become total bad news.

 He never was much of a writer. That's why he had to go in for performances instead. Norman is the patron saint of bad journalism. We were good friends for a long time particularly when he wanted some help from me. I remember him saying we were the two writers people disliked the most." · Washington: "They're such hicks here. And this is the most ompous boring society in the world. If you're interested in power this is the place to be. But you have to have a courtier mentality and I'm much too independent for that." (Vidal ran unsuccessfully for a New York congressional seat in 1980.)

• Women: "I prefer women. I have almost no men friends. Men are generally uneasy around me."

• Himself: "Under this cold exterior, once you break through the ice, you find cold water. There is no warm wonderful person underneath. I am exactly what I seem. People sometimes fight with me. It usually starts out political and ends up personal. Mailer and Capote for instance are always attacking me. They want to be Numero Uno. But I'm No. 1. I am a highly moral person. Purely Tve never been envious of anyone in my life. But I do go into black despair if someone thinks Norman is a greater writer than "Everything I say is so obvious. I say absolutely plain things

and it blows people's minds." When it was suggested to Gore Vidal that he might be portrayed in an interview as a warm, kind, gentle, decent human being, he looked just a bit thrown for the first time all day. Then, half earnestly, half in jest, he said, "Don't you dare."

Duggan and his wife, Helen, were in Richmond. V2., to pick up their seven children by previous marriage for a week's vacation. Last week, the vacation came to an end when six of the youngsters were returned to their homes. After an international search involving police in dozens of countries, the Duggans were found on a farm in Ruwa, Rhodesia, 12 miles from Salisbury. Although Duggan denies the reasoning the assumption is that he chose Rhodesia because the country has no diplomatic relations with the United States. However, Duggan's ex-wife (now Sybel Crone) and Mrs. Duggan's ex-husband (Dennis Wilburn) brought custody
